Wonderland – the first arena

Miramar by the sea. Look at me. Look at me. Miramar by the sea. What is beautiful needs no adorning. Blessed be the Gods of Real Estate and show business, Miramar has been an enclave of the motion picture industry since the late 1920s when groups of actors, actresses and movie officials established the Colony, a Pacific Riviera on a mile-long strip of beach just west of a natural estuary and lagoon. This tract of land, and golden sands, developed from the massive Fringe estate, a property spanning 26 miles of scenic beauty along the California Coast Rancho Miramar built as a farm near the ocean, under the lee of the mountains, with brook trout, wild trees, good soil, and excellent climate. On 13,000 acres of this SoCal estate the Fringe family built a private railroad, a dam, commercial dairy, oil wells, a ceramic tile factory, horse ranches and a family home adjoining one of the most desirable surfing beaches in the world. From the late 1950s, your narrator's family homes were built on Miramar by the sea. Look at me. What is beautiful needs no adorning.

Fire on the Mountain – the second arena

Now ladies and gentlemen, let's turn our attention to ringmaster Wiley Timmons here in the center stage where you've never seen the frowns on the jugglers and the clowns while they all do tricks for you. Watch as we take you down, down, down through the burning rings of fire as the story of Mira-mar is quickly retold through the history of fire on the mountain. Over the past 100 years 30 fires have burned thru the hills, homes and wild life of this beautiful coastal and mountain terrain. At one time or another, almost 90% the land been has been scorched to the ground. Over many years, the fires in these hills have seared thru the Miramar three-ring circus lives of Wiley, his friends, and family.

- 1928 – Las Flores fire (428 acres)
- 1930 – Portrero fire (20,000 acres)
- 1935 – Miramar fire (30,000 acres)
- 1938 -- Pot-anga fire (30,000 acres)
- 1956 - Sherwood / Zuma (56,000 acres)
- 1970 – Wright Fire (28,000 acres)
 - There's smoke on the water, fire in the sky as Wiley drives away to college with a boy's bindlestiff of books, bags and guitar gazing at a young life gone by thru the haze of a rear-view mirror
- 1978 – Kanan fire (25,000 acres)
- 1982 – Dayton fire (43,000 acres)
- 1993 – Green Meadows (38,000 acres)
- 1993 – Pot-anga fire (36,000 acres)
 - The house of Wiley's brother is toast.
- 1996 – Calabasas fire (12,000 acres)
- 2007 – Coral canyon (4,500 acres)
- 2018 – Last and largest, the Woolsey Fire burned in Miramar hills, homes and hollows. The fire ignited, in November burned 96,949 acres destroying 1,643 structures, killing three people, and prompting the evacuation of more than 295,000 residents. ¾ of the mountain sanctuary acres were gone.

HOME TOWN NEWS

The mega-fire of the devastating Woolsey blaze drew back the curtains from the decades of Miramar growth and development. Smoke and mirrors, smoke and mirrors. An awakening for this dyslexic atheist insomniac who stayed awake all night wondering if there is a dog. A memory too weird for words (but here we go anyways). Through the lifting of the smoke, fire, haze and in the ashes of the burn scar emerged the digital footprint of Miramar daily life. Week by week, year by year, here are the stories of community life retold in the archives of the Miramar News, these back pages appearing to a man-child with kaleidoscope eyes. Naturally, we had to rearrange their pages and give them all another name. Return with us now to those thrilling days of yesteryear as we enter the Miramar time machine tumbling, tumbling back thru the headlines of the weekly home town journal. Picture yourself in a boat on a river...as we move to the next arena of our three-ring circus.

Horsing Around in Miramar

REMUDA –

The Miramar Remuda, a two-day celebration of culture and heritage held September 27-28, 1947, took its name from the corral that vaqueros would use to select a horse for the day. The event featured this impressive display of horses (over 900 riders) on both days, in addition to a circus, a "western bathing beauty contest," aquatic races, and an air show

3. The individual's economic needs are best provided by a healthy system of free enterprise
4. The United States must be strong and reliant as an individual nation in a world of unstable international relations.
